ABSTRACT

Returns from the Survey of Testing questionnaire, which was mailed to each testing director in the Great Cities Program, are summarized. The Survey includes: 1) information concerning test standardization; 2) information concerning the use of test results; 3) all tests currently used in the Great City Schools. (MS)

TESTING PROBLEMS

Critics of testing have pointed out that the tests being used are oriented to middle-class values because the test instruments are "standardized" upon samples of children drawn predominately from the middle class milieu. It is charged that the test items reflect unfairly upon inner city and disadvantaged school children whose limited experiences deny them the opportunity to perform well on most tests currently in use. It is argued that tests and test items must be more "relevant" to children's environmental experiences and that measurement problems are compounded by different learning and life styles.

Problems of measurement exist with children of different cultural heritage. Children with multi-lingual or non English-speaking backgrounds are placed at great disadvantage in the classroom. They lack the level of English fluency of their classmates. Such children tend to become separated from regular classroom settings for two reasons:

- 1) Tests that draw heavily upon verbal skills (English) discriminate against these children.
- 2) By the fact that nearly all classroom courses are taught in English, instruction in native English enhances the language sophistication of the average, middle-class American child, while the English-as-a-second language child is attempting to grasp enough lingual skills to function with the subject matter at hand. Therefore he tends to drop behind.

The use of test results becomes an important issue. If children are placed in learning tracks on the basis of questionable test scores, they may be placed in classes that fail to stimulate their intellectual growth.

These children become part of a "locked-in," immobile instructional environment that is socially isolated. The result is an ever-widening gap between these culturally-different students and children of middle-class American Heritage.

COUNCIL INVESTIGATION

The Board of Directors of the Council of the Great City Schools has directed its research staff to investigate issues surrounding testing in the Great City Schools and the subsequent use of test results.

To proceed with its investigation on a sound basis, the Council research staff developed a Survey of Testing questionnaire that was mailed to each testing director in the Great Cities. The purposes of this survey were the following:

1. To determine to what extent the large, urban school systems, particularly the Great Cities, have been/are/will be involved in test instrument standardization.
2. To sample several aspects of the use of test results.

The Survey was divided into three parts:

- Part 1 Information concerning test standardization
- Part 2 Information concerning the use of test results
- Part 3 All test currently used in the Great City Schools

This Document Summarizes the returns from the Great Cities.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS

Test Standardization

Much criticism has been directed at school systems for testing disadvantaged, minority-group children with test instruments that were standardized and normed on middle-class children.

The school population of the Great Cities' Schools (approximately 4.5 million) is predominately inner-city and disadvantaged. One objective of this Survey of Testing was to gain some perspective on the extent to which children in our member city schools have been included in the samples drawn by test publishers. While data gathered on test-standardization participation (past, present, and future) cites only a crude city-by-city measure, without regard for sample sizes within those cities, the data indicates that, thus far, the most widely used test -- the Stanford Achievement Test -- will draw standardization samples in only two of the Great Cities in the 1973 edition.

Use of Test Results

Two items were included in the survey to determine how test results are used. Eight of eighteen Great City School Systems have had their test results published in local newspapers. No effort, to our knowledge, has been made to evaluate this public relations aspect of testing programs or the political repercussions upon large city school systems due to varying policies in releasing or withholding test results.

The more important item in this section revealed that five large city systems acknowledged placing students in learning tracks on the basis of test results. Four school systems indicated the tests they use as one factor in student placement procedures. Three systems indicated the use of intelligence or mental ability tests; one system cited achievement tests only.

Individually-Administered Mental Ability Tests

The Wechsler Scales and the Stanford-Binet appear to be used concurrently by the same cities in their Psychological Services, ESEA, and Follow-Through programs.

Group Mental Ability Tests

The Lorge-Thorndike Intelligence Test is being used by eight of the Great Cities, the Kuhlmann-Anderson is used in five Great Cities.

Readiness Tests

The Metropolitan appears to be the most widely accepted readiness test.

Achievement Tests

The Stanford Achievement Tests are the most popular of the achievement tests. Other widely used tests are the Cooperative Tests, the Metropolitan Tests, the California Tests, the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills, the STEP Tests. The Gates-MacGinitie Reading Tests appear to be a popular test for non-regular school programs.

TEST STANDARDIZATION INFORMATION

2. Is your school system currently involved in any commercial test standardization effort?

Yes 8 No 10

Current Test Standardization Efforts Involving Eight of the Great Cities:

Test	Publisher	City
California Achievement Tests	McGraw-Hill	Chicago
Cooperative Tests	Educational Testing Service	Baltimore
Iowa Tests of Basic Skills	Houghton-Mifflin	Portland
Metropolitan Achievement Test (1970 Edition)		Chicago Pittsburgh
Modern Economics Test	Houghton-Mifflin	Milwaukee
National Educational Development Test (1970)	Science Research Associates	Memphis
Short-Form Test of Academic Aptitude		Chicago
STEP II (Sequential Tests of Educational Progress)	Educational Testing Service	Baltimore Chicago Detroit Milwaukee Philadelphia
SCAT	Educational Testing Service	Baltimore Detroit Philadelphia
Tests of Basic Experience	McGraw-Hill	Baltimore
Wisconsin Modern Math Tests		Milwaukee

3. Has your system been selected by a test publisher for participation in future test-standardization efforts?

Yes 13 No 5

4. Have you agreed to participate in such future efforts?

Yes 9 No 6 Under
Consideration 1 No Response 2

Future Standardization Efforts in Nine Great Cities:

USE OF TEST RESULTS

5. Does your school system publish test results in local newspapers?

Yes 8 No 10

Great Cities that have had test results published in local newspapers:

Baltimore
Chicago
Detroit (1969)
District of Columbia
Los Angeles
Philadelphia
San Diego
San Francisco

Comments:

Results are released to newspapers for publication

The press repeats reports made to Board of Education

6. Does your school system place students in learning tracks on the basis of test results?

Yes 5 No 12 No Response 1

Comments:

- 1) Partially
- 2) "Learning Tracks," No; "Guides for instruction," Yes.
- 3) Test scores are used in conjunction with other information in the assignment of pupils. The concept of a "learning track" is not employed in our system.
- 4) Results of all city-wide tests are used in connection with various class level placements, but are not a single criterion for programming, nor are students actually "tracked" as they may be enrolled in several classes of different levels. Teacher's recommendation is also utilized in determination of appropriate class level assignments.
- 5) Test results are used only as a partial criteria in tracking reading readiness classes, classes for mentally retarded, and scholars (academically talented).
- 6) A scholastic aptitude test score is only one element of information for placement in special or advanced study classes. It is to be used in conjunction with the child's past history of achievement, teacher observation of classroom performance, motivation, interests, and parental opinion.
- 7) For specific learning deficiencies and not on a track basis

Tests cited (in four Districts) as one factor in student placement policies:

- District 1. - Kuhlman-Anderson
Stanford-Binet Intelligence Test
- District 2. - Iowa Test of Basic Skills
Stanford Achievement
Iowa Tests of Educational Development
- District 3. - Kuhlman-Anderson
Otis-Lennon
- District 4. - WISC
Stanford-Binet
